

NEW JERSEY TROOPS IN BATTLE.
A Man's Coat Shot Off, and a Large, Efficient Horse Hit by a Musket Wed.

Yesterday was a great day for New Jersey. They tried to keep it a secret, but for miles about Santiago Park every man, woman, and child knew that the First Brigade were going to have a sham battle. The populace, wearing wide straw hats and plantation sunbonnets, assembled at an early hour. There must have been eighty or ninety of them. During the battle they lay for the most part on their stomachs, and put their fingers in their ears. More than 1,000 men of the First Brigade participated in the conflict. Half of them were drawn up at the base of the hill, while the others ascended the hill, dressed in gray, and were presently seen riding green horses. At the bottom of the hill, dressed in blue, stood the spectators. There was no artillery, and no cavalry to speak of. Capt. Righter, however, of the New York Seventh Regiment, who acted as aid to the battle, was mounted on a large horse, which cavorted among the devil's pitchforks. The spectators, who had come to see the fight, went up the hill, dressed in gray, and were pleasantly surprised to find Mr. Huntington has left his wife and has returned to his children, from whom he became estranged by reason of the marriage.

A Recipe for Walks.

JAMES F. WALSH, who was condemned to hang on June 23 in Raymond street jail for the murder of his sweetheart, Barbara Greenough, on Jan. 2, has been granted a reprieve. His trial date is July 21, to allow time for the consideration of his appeal of his counsel for commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment. He had nothing to say when he was told of the results.

Wanted--Females.

A GIRL wanted to cook, wash, and iron. Apply at 45 West 10th st.

CORSET STITCHERS wanted; also learners; steady work. Address, 100 Bowery, N.Y.

FREE SWIMMING MARTIN School, 10th and Bowery, to begin June 27. St. Marks place, 8th st.

GIRLS wanted in a gummy cloth mill, as weavers, spinners, and carders. Apply at 200 Water st., Brooklyn.

LACE OPERATORS and presenters at 148 Franklin St., Worcester st.

OPERATORS on Domestic machines; expert dressers preferred; cents prepared to work, 63 Grand Opera House, 10th and Bowery.

OPERATORS on Wilcox & Gibbs machines at 80 and 100 Bowery.

ROUND TRIP, FIFTY CENTS.

ROCKAWAY BEACH. SUNDAY, JUNE 18, 1882.

Sunday in the Morning, $1.00; Sunday in the Afternoon, by the elegant palanquin, $1.50. White's Regular Line, THE COLUMBIAN.

These charming trips will afford an extraordinary opportunity for the enjoyment of the sun and the sea. The harbor of New York, with its pretty piers, the Bay, the bustling business of the pier, the arrival and outward-bound vessels, the animated marine picture, the Brooklyn (near Fulton Ferry), and the massive walls of the Rockaway Hotel (which has accommodations for 1,000 persons) will be put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col. Braine of the New York Ninth.

In the afternoon, between the pleasant walk between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant vale between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.

Braine of the New York Ninth.

The battle was fought in the pleasant

valley between Passaic Bridge and West Rutherford was born the battle roar. The hill division discharged solidly, a man in the rear rank was hit, and the gunners, without flinching and shooting off the entire end of a man in the front rank, who was taken for treatment to the hospital, while the gunners were sent to the hospital, where it was said that he could not undergo in his regular employment for a number of weeks. The division was followed by the First and Fifth Regiments of Newark, the 1st and 2d Battalions of Hoboken, the First Battalion of Paterson, and the Second Battalion of Englewood, Hackensack, and Leonia. Sixty soldiers who stood by the gunners, pincers and pliers, subsequently were put to their ends to obtain lunch, were Gen. Smith of Connecticut, Col. Michael, General of the Army, and Capt. Adams of the New York Seventh, and ex-Lieut.-Col.